

TRUDEAU CREDITED WITH VICTORY

Liberal romp spurs election talk

Prime Minister Trudeau played down speculation about an early general election Tuesday night as Liberals emerged victorious in five of six federal by-elections.

As jubilant Liberals attributed the results to Trudeau, the prime minister told an impromptu Ottawa news conference they represented a vote of confidence in government positions on national unity, the economy and Liberal ability to manage the country "in every sense until the next election."

Liberals held four seats in Quebec, took a Prince Edward Island seat from the Conservatives, and ran second to Social Credit in Temiscamingue, left vacant by the death Dec. 16 of former Social Credit leader Real Caouette.

Conservatives increased their vote in Quebec but ran strongly in only one of the five ridings, Terrebonne.

The loss of Malpeque, the Prince Edward Island riding, was a sharp disappointment.

Conservative Leader Joe Clark denied that his head is on the block.

"Not at all," he told reporters. "The party knew how difficult it was for us in Quebec."

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said he was pleased with the party's strong second-place showing in Verdun, adding it would be a base for the next election. Neither Broadbent nor Clark expected a general election before 1977.

Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, chief Liberal organizer in Quebec, called the results "an exceptional victory for Trudeau."

Also commenting on the results, Quebec City Mayor Gilles Lamontagne, Liberal winner in Langlier, said:

"It's a victory for Trudeau as leader of the Liberal party and a victory for the good sense of Quebecers."

Only changeover in the six by-elections took place in Prince Edward Island, where Liberal Donald Wood, 42, broke a 25-year Conservative hold on Malpeque.

Liberals again won four seats they had held in Quebec and made a respectable secondplace showing in Temiscamingue, where Gilles Caouette, 37, held for Social Credit a seat left vacant last December by the death of his father Real.

Conservatives ran second in three seats won by Liberals but showed real strength only in Terrebonne.

Conservative Leader Joe Clark said last week a poor showing would raise questions about his leadership.

Both he and Trudeau campaigned in the ridings last week.

Political observers had predicted a good Liberal showing might mean a general election next fall.

Roland Comtois, 48, who was elected again in his seat in Terrebonne, northeast of Montreal island, said when asked whether he expects a general election: "I hope not for a while. But I'll be ready in six months."

Comtois resigned as MP for Terrebonne last fall to run in the Nov. 15 Quebec election and was badly beaten by Jacques Parizeau, currently finance minister in the Parti Quebecois government.

"It's a vote for Trudeau, a vote for Canada, and a vote for Comtois," Comtois told cheering party workers at his campaign headquarters in Rosemere.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons after the by-elections: Liberal 141; Progressive Conservative 95, New Democratic Party 16, Social Credit 11, Independent 1.

BIGGS-MARONEY DEBATE

Next mayor wants Thornhill

sponsored by the Terrace chamber of commerce, Tuesday. Maroney and Biggs are contesting the June 4th mayoral by-election in Terrace.

Policies similar but styles differ

By ALLAN KRASNICK
The two contenders for Terrace's vacant mayor's chair squared off for the first time in this year's by-election campaign, Tuesday, displaying differences in style more than substance.

On key issues like industrial development, municipal expansion and a properly-salaried, full-time mayor, contenders Dave Maroney and Sharon Biggs differed only in tone.

Speaking to a chamber of commerce luncheon crowd of about 50, the two agreed that growth in Terrace should follow a steady, incremental pace; that industrial expansion could only be achieved if Terrace amalgamated with Thornhill, thus acquiring more land; and that taxpayers could not yet afford the $25,000 salary of a full-time mayor.

Biggs said that industries compatible with local resources should be stressed. This implies an expansion of tourist services, an industry which the candidate says supplanted mining and forestry as British Columbia's most important capital generator during the recent recession.

Biggs attributed Terrace's problems during the economic lapse on the region's "habitual reliance" on the resource-extracting industries.

Maroney predicted brighter times ahead. The local economy reached "rock bottom" last fall, he told the meeting, but was now beginning to pick up.

"There's no boom up ahead," he said, "but we're probably better off without it. We're better off with slow, steady growth."

A five-year council veteran, Maroney believes many of Terrace's problems also stem from the unavailability of industrial land. To alleviate this, the candidate, like his opponent, supports expansion of the district's boundaries to include Thornhill.

Amalgamation may be expensive for Terrace residents, Biggs said, "but until (the district) can attract industry, we won't be able to provide services."

It was the chamber of commerce that first prompted debate on the feasibility of a full-time mayor, so the two candidates often addressed the issue at the chamber luncheon.

Biggs said she would be a full-time mayor, spearheading industrial development efforts and personally directing administration. Her weapons, she told the meeting, would be innovation and energy.

Maroney said it would be premature for Terrace to elect a 9-to-5 mayor.

"One of the problems of a full-time mayor is that it becomes an elected position with a price tag on it. What do you do if you get the wrong man for the job, if he can't handle it? (Council) then gets put in a poor position."

With a salary of $25,000, the mayor's post would attract "a lot of people who probably feel they can do the job but maybe they couldn't."

Maroney believes discussion and study of the issue should continue until the fall, when a firmer decision could be made.

The chamber-sponsored debate marked the first face-to-face confrontation between the two candidates in the June 4 by-election, necessitated by the resignation of Gordon Rowland.

105 CHILDREN HELD HOSTAGE

Parents want vengeance

BOVANSMLDE (AP) — Anguish and fury grew among parents and other townsfolk in this village in the northern Netherlands on Tuesday as South Moluccan terrorists held 105 children and six teachers hostage in a school for a second day.

There was talk of reprisals against other South Moluccans here. "God help them if they kill any of those poor kids," said taxi driver Pieter Kan. "It will mean civil war around here. The people here are ready to lynch them."

Ten miles away, a second group of South Moluccans held 50 to 60 other hostages on a hijacked train.

As a deadline neared for threatened death of hostages, the Dutch government was silent on whether it intended to meet the demands of the militant Asian immigrants.

The terrorists—six at the school and seven on the train—demanded that 21 jailed South Moluccans be released by the Dutch government and that all 34 South Moluccans and at least some of the hostages be flown out of the country on a jumbo jet. They set a deadline of 2 p.m. local time (a.m. EDT) today.

It was not known where the terrorists wanted to be flown.

Fourteen of the prisoners were serving sentences for a similar twin terrorist strike in 1975, when they tried to force the Dutch government to help them win independence from Indonesia for their homeland. Indonesia and the South Molucca islands were once Dutch colonies.

Justice ministry official

Toos Faber said there were no negotiations under way at either site, about 90 miles northeast of Amsterdam.

"The terrorists have consistently let us know in the few conversations we have had that they do not wish to negotiate, nor do they want a mediator," she said.

In a list of demands released Tuesday, the South Moluccans threatened to kill their hostages if mediators were sent.

The few contacts authorities have had with the terrorists have been made through telephone links to the school, where children aged six to 12 are being held, and the train.

Carter endorses refugee homeland

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. President Carter and Saudi Arabia's Crown Prince Fahd discussed on Tuesday a "process" for setting up a Palestinian homeland with "recognized boundaries" alongside a secure Israel, a White House spokesman said.

But Fahd cautioned that the U.S. should not expect his country to force a solution upon other Arab nations.

"It should be understood that Saudi Arabia is a small country and cannot really do all that is expected of it," the prince told reporters at the state department after his meetings with Carter and State Secretary Cyrus Vance.

Several weeks ago Carter endorsed a homeland for Palestinian refugees. He was the first president to take that stand. But he was not clear if he meant an independent state, as demanded by the Palestine Liberation Organization, or an enclave within Jordan.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said recognized boundaries would be relevant to either a Palestinian state or an entity within Jordan.

RAFT WINNERS

The Herald wasn't even entered in Sunday afternoon's Delta King raft race but, like some of the entrants, we ended up all wet. Despite what you may have read yesterday, Kitimat Booming Contractors took top prize in the contest, followed by Pohle Lumber, and Al Jacques' Terrace raft.

The prize for best dressed entrants was captured by the Airport Fire Hall participants.

A $500 pool for best time was won by Oscar Grant; 50 second prizes in the pools were won by Thorne Walton and H. Ismail.

CENSORSHIP

Feds dominate morals issues

OTTAWA (CP) — "I've heard a lot of strange things here today," commented Mr. Justice Wishart Spence Tuesday as the Supreme Court of Canada began hearing an appeal dealing with film censorship.

His comment came after Louis Lindholm, appearing for the attorney-general's office of British Columbia, argued there are areas of morality where a provincial government can enact laws although the subject matter is governed by federal criminal law.

Clark's schedule firmed

Federal Conservative Leader Joe Clark will visit the Terrace-Kitimat area early next week. The visit is part of a week-long British Columbia tour which will take Clark and his wife, Maureen McTeer, through eight federal ridings.

Clark will arrive in Kitimat Monday afternoon, May 30 after flying over the proposed Alaska to Kitimat oil tanker route. In Kitimat, the Tory Leader will meet with the Mayor and council while his wife tours the Alcan smelter.

There will be a public reception for Clark and his wife on Monday evening at 8 p.m. in the Terrace Hotel.

On Tuesday morning Clark will address the students of Caledonia Senior Secondary School in Terrace before continuing on to Prince George.

Organizers of the tour say that the purpose of the visit is to enable Clark to "familiarize himself with problems of deep concern" to area residents, including: details of air-sea rescue problems, transportation and the issues surrounding the question of the Kitimat Pipeline.

The Herald will be covering all aspects of the Opposition Leader's visit to the area.

As an example, Lindholm cited the "standard of morality on a local basis" and said this might apply to the showing of movies not banned by Ottawa.

Judge Spence observed that Lindholm appeared to be arguing that provinces cannot ban movies which are bad but can ban movies that are not so bad.

"It seemed strange," said Lindholm, but that was what he meant.

Ontario, Quebec, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia are siding with Nova Scotia in an appeal against a Nova Scotia appeal court decision which said the province has no power to censor films.

If the Supreme Court agrees with the Nova Scotia court, film censorship might end across Canada until the federal government exercises its full powers in the field.

The appeal centres on 43-year-old Gerard McNeil, father of two boys and, at the time, editor of the weekly Dartmouth, N.S., Free Press.

McNeil became interested in a ruling by the Amusements Regulations Board of Halifax which banned the showing of Last Tango in Paris.

The board refused to say why it had banned the movie and McNeil, contending the board invaded federal jurisdiction by finding the movie obscene, took the board to court.

After more than a year of getting court approval to bring his case to trial, the provincial appeal court ruled in McNeil's favor. The Nova Scotia government then appealed to the Supreme Court.

The province argued that the censor board was acting within a legal framework designed by the federal government to regulate such matters as to where people could watch movies in Nova Scotia and to ensure the safety of movie house premises.

The appeal continues today.

Carrier boys on the march

Next week, 94 carrier boys and girls will mount a massive campaign to sell subscriptions to the new "daily" Herald.

Free since converting to daily publication May 2, the Herald will, as of next week, be available for home delivery at $3 a month.

Just over a third of the carriers will canvass the Kitimat area, while the rest will concentrate on Terrace, Thornhill and Nass Valley.

With a bolstered editorial staff, the paper hopes to publish a balance of local, national and international news. Of course, there can never be as much local news in each edition of a paper that comes out five times a week as one that appears but once. However, if totalled up at the end of the week, there will be as much, if not more information of local interest in the daily publication.

In addition, we intend to select and edit wire copy from a local perspective and tie it in, where possible, with stories that break in the Terrace-Kitimat area.

The region we intend to cover is vibrant and important in the over all British Columbia picture. With luck, work and a little help from our friends, the readers, the Daily Herald should develop into a vital part of the communities it serves.

With local news and sports, wire copy from other parts of B.C. and around the world, a local point of view and, lest we forget, local advertising, the Herald will prove to be a welcomed alternative to the dailies from Vancouver.

Doctor tells ailing Israeli PM to slow down his hectic pace

TEL AVIV (AP) — A doctor advised on Tuesday that ailing Menachem Begin slow down, and Israelis wondered whether the Likud bloc leader will be well enough to take over as Israel's prime minister. "It's too early to tell—we'll have to wait and see" whether he'll be up to the job, said Dr. Shlomo Laniado. "I said he must slow down. I would advise anybody working at Mr. Begin's pace to slow down." Begin, 63, was in the cardiac section of Ichilov Hospital, where he was admitted Sunday after feeling ill. Doctors said he did not have a new heart attack and would go home after a few days of rest and observation. The right-wing party leader was in hospital for three weeks in March after suffering a heart attack during the election campaign. The Likud won the May 17 election, taking 43 seats in the 120-seat Knesset, or parliament. Begin's aides said they are sure he will be able to function as prime minister once a coalition is formed, probably in mid-June. Party leaders, meanwhile, continued negotiations with smaller parties to form the coalition. Ezer Weizman and Simcha Ehrlich met with representatives of the Democratic Movement for Change (DMC), which won 14 seats in its first run for election. Likud and DMC negotiators said they reached partial agreement on some aspects of foreign policy, such as insistence on keeping the Jordan River as Israel's eastern border and opposing efforts to set up a Palestinian state. This left open the future of the occupied West Bank, sandwiched between the river and Israel. Begin has said he considers the West Bank part of Israel, but the DMC platform would return populous areas to Jordan. There are an estimated 700,000 Arabs in the West Bank area.

Likud also is negotiating with the National Religious party, the right-wing Shomzion faction headed by Gen. Ariel Sharon, and two small ultra-religious parties. Together they total 19 seats, which would give Likud a thin majority in parliament if a coalition were formed. Likud hopes the DMC also will join to broaden the majority. Political observers say the fate of the coalition, and even Likud itself, depends on whether Begin recovers.

Top Soviet man dropped

MOSCOW (AP) President Nikolai Podgorny, one of the three most powerful men in the Soviet Union, was dropped without explanation Tuesday from the ruling council of the Soviet Communist party.

Moscow radio and television did not say whether the 74-year-old Podgorny will retain the presidency, a largely ceremonial post, but observers said the position will be virtually impossible to hold without membership in the party's Politburo.

There was also no sign whether Podgorny had retired voluntarily. In other cases, Central Committee communiques often say a leading figure has left in connection with retirement, ill health or "at his own request."

Tuesday's communique said the Communist party's

Central Committee had "freed Comrade Podgorny from the duties of a member of the Politburo of the Central Committee of the Communist party of the Soviet Union."

Theoretically, the presidency is bestowed and taken away by the Supreme Soviet, the country's parliament, but its standing executive committee can act without approval from the full house. The Supreme Soviet next meets June 16. Podgorny is the first of the three men who overthrew Nikita Khrushchev in 1964 to fall by the political wayside. Still in power are Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev, 70, viewed as the country's most powerful politician, and Premier Alexei Kosygin, 73.

Podgorny had recently appeared in robust political and physical health.

He toured black countries in southern Africa in March in a major diplomatic foray by the Kremlin into that area.

French program terrible, says MP

Stuart Leggatt, New Democratic Party MP for New Westminster, told the convention that Canada's future depends on developing an awareness of French culture.

Leggatt, who addressed the delegates in English, pointed to himself as "a product of seven years of French in public school" and described B.C.'s French language program as "terrible."

He warned of "a rise of bigotry" against French Canadians and other ethnic groups and urged the federation to expand its activities to promote understanding between French and English-speaking B.C. residents.

Second language vital: Gauthier

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — The director of La Federation des Francophones Hors Quebec said Saturday that French-Canadians outside Quebec are being assimilated into the English way of life at the rate of 27 per cent a year.

Hubert Gauthier told a meeting of La Federation des Franco-Colombiens, representing French-speaking residents of British Columbia, that if French language and culture disappear, Canada may cease to exist.

At the current rate of assimilation, he said, it will soon "be the English who speak French among themselves."

"At the rate things are going, our grandchildren, if not our children, will no longer be able to speak French and might not already know how."

The federation represents about 8,000 of the 110,000 French-speaking residents of the province.

"We want simply that it be recognized, once and for all, that we are here, that we have historic rights that go back to 1793 in British Columbia, that we represent a cultural force for the whole country," he said.

Gauthier said that except for Quebec the only province officially to recognize French-Canadians is New Brunswick.

In the educational sector, he said, French-Canadians have privileges, but no rights.

With French language radio and television, for example, "we find that the programming comes from Quebec and that it is very difficult to break through the national network," Gauthier said.

He said that when French-Canadians do demand equality "we are accused of racism, that we are too demanding, that we are not being reasonable and that we are extremists."

"It is racism to ask for services for which you and I pay taxes? Is it racism to receive services in education and communication to which we have a right? Is it racism to love our language and our culture and to want to keep them?"

Oil sands drama shelved by the CBC

TORONTO (CP) — Denis Harvey, acting assistant general manager of CBC's English-language network, says the company has shelved a controversial drama until next season or later, but denies management is trying to suppress it.

Harvey said in a recent interview that the drama, about Alberta's billion-dollar oil sands project, was ready for telecast in February and has been cleared by corporation lawyers.

Directed by Peter Pearson, the drama has actors portraying Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed and other real-life participants in the project.

Harvey said instead of the drama, the final prime-time period this season will be devoted to two 90-minute programs about organized crime in Canada and the U.S.

He said the company has been so occupied with parliamentary hearings and the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) investigation into the CBC, that management has not had time to make a decision on when the oil sands drama will be shown.

"I can honestly tell you that it boils down to a moral decision about putting conversations into the mouths of real people, some of whom are still in office," Harvey said of the drama.

"We've just scheduled the two organized crime programs for June 12 and 13 at 9:30 p.m. each, and that probably takes the last available time in this year's schedule."

"I'm not going to say we're not going to run it, but because we've missed the last hole-in-the-sky timing this season, I doubt if the decision we need now to finalize it will be held in the near future."

The drama deals with the Syncrude project and the events from April, 1973, to February, 1975, that led to its implementation.

"It's a tough decision to make," Harvey said. "I can assure you that we've had several discussions about it and we can't reach a decision among ourselves. No matter what we say, it's a powerful drama."

The council is trying to decide whether to require a formal environmental impact statement before beginning hearings on the proposal.

Global business moves on bribes

Interpreting the news

LONDON (CP) — Allegations that British Leyland has used bribery to secure export sales have been partly discredited this week, but the furore has thrust the British government into a top-level investigation of this country's trade practices.

The accusations, published in The Daily Mail, lost much of their force when a Leyland executive admitted he faked at least one of the key documents used as evidence by the newspaper.

Police have since charged him with forgery.

But the state-owned car manufacturing company, and the agency that monitors its operations, have both launched inquiries into its practices, alleged by The Mail to include both bribes and extravagant commissions to foreign agents in the Middle East and elsewhere.

And this week Prime Minister James Callaghan ordered Trade Secretary Edmund Dell to report on the commercial practices—or malpractices—of British industry generally.

Prime Minister Trudeau, with Callaghan, U.S. President Jimmy Carter and other industrial leaders, condemned corruption in international business during their summit meeting here earlier this month.

Their joint communique said: "We consider that irregular practices and improper conduct should be eliminated from international trade, banking and commerce, and we welcome the work being done toward international agreements prohibiting illicit payments."

In Canada, a Commons committee has been investigating agents fees on sales of Candu nuclear reactors in South Korea and Argentina, and charges that Crown-owned Polymar Corp. provided kickbacks to foreign customers enabling them to avoid local taxes.

In the United States, authorities are investigating similar charges involving the Lockheed and Boeing aircraft companies.

And at the United Nations, a committee is looking for ways to enforce an international ban on malpractice.

Imposing a single international ethic of business behavior is no simple matter.

As Callaghan told the Commons, part of the onus lies with the customer countries to stop underhanded deals.

It is no secret that in many countries, including some in the Middle East, payments that appear to be bribes are accepted as normal practice.

Under British law, in fact, bribes paid abroad to secure contracts can be deducted as a business expense against taxes.

The Guardian reports that Callaghan "is not in favor of something resembling 'unilateral disarmament' by British exporters while other countries continue to employ disreputable methods."

The Financial Times confirms that British officials "see no reason why Britain should handicap her own companies against the widely accepted practices in many overseas markets."

There is also dispute about the application by one government of its own laws or ethics in other countries.

In Canada, for example, authorities are resisting attempts by the U.S. government to secure company records dealing with the uranium industry's price and supply policies.

The Canadian government has tried in this and other cases to prevent the extraterritorial application of U.S. laws when they differ from Canadian laws, especially when they conflict with accepted Canadian practice—in anti-trust suits, for example.

Voice of the readers

WW II's tankers unlike today's

Dear Sir: I have read Cyril Shelford's letter, in your paper of April 6th, in reply to a letter from T.D. Pearce re: the oil pipeline and tanker route to Kitimat.

Mr. Shelford now has a questionnaire in the paper which he is asking readers to fill in and return to him stating whether we are for or against the projects. One statement in his letter which he has repeated several times is that during the war, more oil tankers were torpedoed or bombed than would be lost by accident in fifty years, with no apparent harm to world fisheries.

I heard this statement refuted by an apparently knowledgeable person on a news broadcast. He explained that there wasn't the large number of tankers at that time carrying heavy crude oil, that most of the tankers sunk were carrying refined products, airplane gas, jet fuel and the like which caught fire and burned, or evaporated, thus causing no damage.

Also, a tanker carrying heavy crude, which was torpedoed and sank before much of the crude escaped, would likely carry it to a depth where the pressure is great enough that nothing, no matter how light, will come to the surface, and at these depths, there is very little or no sea life. Not so the tanker which ends up a rocky shoal.

It was reported over C.B.C. news just over a week ago that the rocky shores around Chedabucto Bay, in Nova Scotia, are still covered with oil, and the shellfish in the area still affected, seven years after the oil spill which occurred, and which was supposedly satisfactorily cleaned up.

The Captain of the Torrey Canyon, a relatively small tanker wrecked off the south coast of England some years ago, saw the rocks when still a mile and a half ahead of his ship and immediately signaled the engine room to change course. But in that distance the ship did not respond enough to miss the rocks.

How long then, would it take some of the monsters afloat today to respond to a change in course?

No, Mr. Shelford, SPEC and other such organizations did not stop the proposed steel mill. The promoters were prepared to build a mill that would have polluted the air in our valley to the point that it would, under certain weather conditions, have been almost impossible to live here, and when pollution standards were raised to require a clean operation, with added costs, the promoters lost interest. You should be aware of that. We don't need an oil refinery on the north coast, and none are in the present plans. We are being well supplied from the south and east. The pipeline from Edmonton to Vancouver is running at one third its capacity.

This can be hooked into a system at Port Angeles and the flow reversed to carry Alaskan oil to Edmonton and then south to the U.S.A. with a new investment about one quarter the cost of the line from Kitimat, and no danger to either our North Coast or the inner Strait of Juan De Fuca.

I very much doubt the oil and gas shortages are as critical as we are made to believe. The scare tactics being used are justification for price increases. If natural gas is now in short supply, why are the owners of the new gas fields in Alberta and the area west of Dawson Creek so anxious to sign up 20-year contracts with buyers? Why is the Alberta government considering the building of huge petrochemical plants costing hundreds of millions of dollars? What about the Mexican oil reserves rated at some fifty billion barrels? These reserves equal any in the Arab fields.

A committee in the U.S.A. just recently stated we will be in trouble from fuel shortages in four years.

But an independent United Nations committee on fossil fuels stated a few months ago that we have oil reserves to last the world for another hundred years. Who are we to believe?

Much of the business community says, "Build the pipeline, it will provide much needed work and stimulate business." True, for about one year while the line is being constructed in the Kitimat-Terrace area there will be a flurry of activity, with the beer parlors and liquor stores doing a rushing business. But if camps are established, the catering for these camps will be contracted out of Vancouver, with not too much benefit to local stores.

Once completed, Kitimat and Terrace will share possibly 30 permanent jobs, not much when a tanker oil spill might jeopardize the livelihood of hundreds of fishermen, fish plant workers, and Native villages. Mr. Shelford asks, "If we don't allow the steel mill or pipeline, what alternatives to boost our economy do you suggest?"

Personally, I don't think we should be in any great rush to bring in industries which may run a few years then fold.

Look what happened in Newfoundland. The distress after the industries closed down was worse than before they were established.

Let's make the best of what we have and fill in the gaps as they show up. It isn't absolutely essential that the town keeps mushrooming. Before the war we were a community of about a thousand people, and we were just as busy and just as happy as we are now, maybe more so.

It will be interesting to see how many of our elected representatives from different levels of government will have sold out to the oil lobby, or feel obligated to support Mr. Cressy after being wined and dined, and subjected to a steady barrage of propaganda by the dozen or more oil representatives on that week of pleasure cruising.

After drinking oil company liquor and participating in oil company hospitality for a week there will be those who feel they just couldn't be so mean as to oppose the Kitimat oil pipeline and tanker route.

Choosing policy (25 words or less)

What does the government do when it is faced with a serious environmental problem like that of Eurasian milfoil in Okanagan Lake?

Does it call in a bevy of botanists to prepare a report?

Does it consult other jurisdictions about how they have handled similar problems? Does it send scientists to seek out a solution?

Of course not. Such methods are simplistic and archaic compared to the one being used by Environment Minister Jim Nielsen. He knows that Eurasian milfoil is a weed that is spreading to such an extent that it seriously threatens the future of the Okanagan basin.

So what does he do? He holds a contest. That's right, a contest—like you might have for "Why I like Rover Dog Food" (25 words or less)—with grand prizes, runners-up and the whole bit.

A recent news release from the Environment Ministry states that the government "will offer prizes of $10,000, $5,000, and $2,500 in a competition for conceptual drawings and engineering specifics of a device designed to cure the problem."

The second stage of the competition will permit the Ministry of the Environment to award an additional amount up to $50,000 for the contestant who, upon request, fabricates equipment and demonstrates its performance.

Here we have a government minister who for one-and-a-half years has headed a department solely concerned with the environment, who has access to the top scientific minds and environmental experts in the world, whose job it is to provide direction and leadership, and the best he can come up with to solve a menace which threatens the very life of Okanagan Lake is to hold a contest.

What can we look for next? A contest on the provincial budget (25 pages or less)? A contest on when to hold the next election (25 months or less)? Is this government?

When Mr. Nielsen was appointed Environment Minister he frankly admitted that he knew nothing about the environment. Apparently, nothing has changed.

If not, watch out—changes to land commission act are upcoming and Nielsen is the Minister in charge.

Given his present record, perhaps the provincial government would be well advised to hold a contest on who should be the next minister of the environment.

Thought for food

Although the purpose of schools is to educate, not only in straight academic subjects but in other matters as well, they have been remiss in the field of nutrition.

Sure, all schools have health classes in which students are taught the dry facts about proteins, vitamins, enzymes and so on, but at the same time, school cafeterias are full of sweet junk foods, overcooked vegetables and white "simulated" bread.

In addition most school functions are provided with potato chips (some brands don't have any potato in them), pop and doughnuts.

Regardless of what is being taught in formal health classes, students are being encouraged to eat food that not only lacks nutrition, but, in some cases, is downright harmful.

The problem lies in the fact that teachers, principals, school board trustees and parents alike are, themselves, ignorant of what goes into the food that goes into their mouths.

Indeed, even doctors are regrettably uninformed about the effects of certain foods and chemicals on the human body. To compound the felony, doctors often make a point of discrediting legitimate nutritionists simply because they don't have M.D.'s.

Even so, improvements can be made simply by using common sense. Without knowing anything about nutrition, most people are aware that pop and potato chips, except in very moderate quantities, are dangerous to health.

We know, without being told, that processed, packaged desserts are sugar and little more. If parents would stop indulging and schools stop providing, the diets of today's children could not help but improve.

"Frankly, I don't know what he sees in her."

Behind the news

Puzzle of S.African whites

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — Prime Minister John Vorster's assertion to reporters after his recent meeting in Vienna with U.S. Vice-President Walter Mondale that "my conscience is clear" is taken by political analysts here as a clear indication of the enormous ideological gulf between the white South African administration and other Western governments.

For the fact remains that South Africa's black majority population continues to face a life of humiliation, degradation and blatant discrimination.

There have been some minor changes, especially in the big cities. Blacks now share public parks with whites, there have been moves to integrate the races in sports and many of the petty apartheid signs on public buildings have been removed.

But observers here are unaware of any change that has fundamentally altered the status of even the most brilliant and highly qualified black person.

From the moment a black child becomes aware of his surroundings he is told by his parents that the white man is his boss or master.

If he gets to school—and there is no compulsory education for blacks—his own culture is swamped in a sea of propaganda aimed at convincing him that the white man made South Africa a dynamic and wealthy country.

Blacks make up 70 per cent of South Africa's 22 million population. Yet the state spends about $650 a year educating a white child and $40 on a black child.

If he has completed a secondary education, the black youth is then confronted with the inability to move freely around the country in search of the best job, the inability to express his talents because of preferential job treatment for whites, and the inability to earn the same money as a white for doing the same job.

In the gold mines, a white foreman may make $800 a month; a black with similar responsibilities would be lucky to earn $320 a month.

Government officials maintain that the reason for the wage gap is that the country does not have the money.

In addition to the problems of job inequality, the black worker is also confronted by a apartheid laws connected with his work.

For a start, there are the influx control regulations, especially significant for the mine worker in the Transvaal gold reef who is allowed to leave his homeland on a specific contract, normally not less than six months.

In effect, influx control makes it illegal for a man to live with his wife and family during the term of his contract. The miners live in company compounds.

Most political analysts, especially those to the left of the South African centre, rest their hopes on the demise of the republic's British-style government and its replacement with a tiered system unique in Africa.

A cabinet committee has been meeting for several months to discuss ways of moving away from the British system.

Sources said the changes will involve a switch to an executive presidency and greatly expanded powers for the present multi-racial cabinet council.

The plan is also said to include a system of local government in which the urban black would, for the first time, have a real measure of control over problems such as housing and education.

The build-up of international pressure against the Vorster regime is seen by observers here as a crucial factor in bringing about an early change in discriminatory domestic policies.

JUBILEE YEAR

Elizabeth as queen

LONDON (CP) — As British author Elizabeth Longford puts it, the Queen and television have come a long way together.

Author Longford, who wrote The Royal House of Windsor, in a profile of the Queen recalls the monarch telling of her first television appearance, at Christmas 1957.

The Queen recalled her surprise at the makeup of those early days—her face painted with yellow blobs like a clown—and the discomfort at Christmas luncheon with holes bored through walls, television cables running into the rooms and icy draughts running in with the cables.

And her family thought she was shivering with nerves!

During a more recent Christmas broadcast the Queen made a calm and authoritative appeal for tolerance and hope to the people of the Commonwealth in their present anxieties.

Queen Elizabeth II was born on April 26, 1926.

She was an ideally "wanted" baby of whom her father, the future King George VI, said: "We always wanted a child to make our happiness complete."

Miss Langford describes her marriage to Prince Philip in Westminster Abbey on Nov. 20, 1947 as a love match. But only those in the Abbey saw the Princess's face in all its serenity and radiance, for there was as yet no television.

Nevertheless her characteristic impact of "grave and gay" had already been made on the radio during the Second World War as early as 1940.

This was in the period known as the "Phoney War." But the Princess's message to other children was not phoney. Her promise of self-dedication was so obviously sincere that a woman writer who heard her predicted: "If there are still queens in the world a generation hence, this child will be a good queen."

Not only the British but people in most parts of the world were able to hear Princess Elizabeth give a second pledge of service—on her 21st birthday, when the war was over.

This time she knew much more about the strenuous job to which she had been born. "I shall not have the strength to carry out this resolution alone," she said, "unless you join in it with me, as I now invite you to do."

A CANADIAN WATERGATE?

Burglary not the work of RCMP squad

OTTAWA (CP) — The government denies any RCMP involvement in a 1970 break-in and burglary in Toronto which yielded information on so-called subversives working in the public service.

Justice Minister Ronald Basford told the Commons on Tuesday that the federal police force was not involved in the break-in and theft of a mailing list and other documents from the offices of Praxis Corp., a Toronto activist group working with the poor.

Opposition MPs called the a-k-i, i-r-a-t-e-g-a-t-e-style scandal and made new demands for a public inquiry after two Toronto newspapers published weekend stories on the issue.

The Toronto Sun published the names of 21 federal civil servants who were accused of subversive activities by former solicitor-general Jean-Pierre Goyer in a confidential memorandum to Prime Minister Trudeau and several other ministers.

The Globe and Mail said Metropolitan Toronto police are investigating whether the RCMP security branch was somehow responsible for the Praxis break-in and burglary.

The Goyer letter said Praxis had taken over another group and was using it as "a radicalizing agency among the poor."

The letter also named 21 civil servants, including some who now are in senior government jobs. It said they "appear to have as their aim the destruction of the existing political and social structure in Canada."

Basford, acting for Francis Fox, the current solicitor-general who was not in the Commons Tuesday, said the RCMP were co-operating with Toronto police in investigating the Praxis burglary.

He also said RCMP received information on Praxis from more than one source, but would not comment further.

Frank Oberle (PC—Prince George-Peace River) said in the Commons that Goyer's office in 1971 took "raw intelligence" from the RCMP relating to Praxis and government employees and added several names of their own to the list of so-called subversives.

Outside the House, Basford refused to comment, saying he was "not briefed."

Oberle and Elmer MacKay (PC—Central Nova) told reporters Goyer evidently drew up his own blacklist of civil servants who met with government disapproval.

The Goyer letter effectively accused employees of "high treason" although none has been found guilty of any crime, Oberle said.

MacKay said Trudeau and his ministers cited national security and other protections in the past to withhold information on the Praxis break-in and the compilation of the list.

"We still don't know whether Goyer was fully aware of what was going on," he said.

Goyer has refused to answer questions on the issue.

Goyer's letter, leaked to the opposition who released it several months ago with most of the names removed, identified the 21 civil servants as proponents of "extra-parliamentary opposition ... opposed ... to the electoral process."

The letter said that Martin

Loney, a former civil servant, headed a small group of former campus revolutionaries who wanted to organize other sympathetic civil servants.

Others previously named included Walter Rudnicki and Farrell Toombs of government-owned Central Mortgage and Housing

Corp. and Robert Rabinovitch, now assistant cabinet secretary for social policy.

Rudnicki was fired for what Basford said were reasons unrelated to Praxis or the list. He subsequently won $18,000 in damages in a court action for wrongful dismissal.

BY NATIVE LEADERS

American officials told Alcan route not tolerable

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian native leaders told U.S. officials today that an Alaskan highway route for a natural gas pipeline is no more acceptable in the near future than the Arctic Gas route that would cross the northern Yukon and Mackenzie Valley.

Daniel Johnson, chairman of the Council of Yukon Indians, predicted that a Canadian commission studying the Alaskan highway proposal would come to the same conclusion as the Berger Commission did about the Mackenzie Valley route: any construction should be delayed 10 years to allow natives time to develop institutions to handle the impact.

George Erasmus, president of the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories, said it is "asinine" and "ludicrous" to argue that pipeline construction would be less socially devastating along the Alaskan highway than along the Mackenzie Valley.

Proponents of the former route have said that because of the highway's existence they would have less trouble with native land claims and environmental objections.

But Erasmus and Johnson told the president's Council on Environmental Quality that such statements are based on too narrow a viewpoint.

"It's not a land problem, it's a people problem," Erasmus said.

The two suggested that the U.S. give up the idea of a pipeline through Canada and instead turn to the El Paso proposal to bring Alaskan natural gas south by ship.

Johnson said the biggest fear of northern natives is the rush of people who would come into the north to build the pipeline and to join the development and tourism boom that would follow the pipeline.

He said Poothills Pipe Lines Ltd., the Canadian proponent of the Alaskan highway route, is wrong in promising that it could control such impact.

Johnson recalled that as a child he and others in northern villages would hide when men from work crews would come to the villages to "terrorize" the residents and look for women.

The Northwest Territories leader said that for such reasons and for the more important social damage that would be done by a pipeline construction project, any pipeline in the near future down the Mackenzie Valley would be an "essentially genocidal" act contrary to international law.

Johnson repeated his council's stand that at least seven to 10 years is needed for Yukon land claims to be settled, for Yukon natives to develop institutions for controlling development and for a Yukon economy to be built up that will withstand the impact of pipeline construction.

The council is to make a report to the president by July 1, evaluating the environmental impact statements made so far in consideration of the various pipeline proposals.

The province University plan is criticized

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — A plan to establish four interior university campuses in the province is impractical because the range of courses offered would be too limited, a Simon Fraser University study of the proposal has concluded.

The university's report, prepared by a committee of administrators and professors, says a "distance-learning" system of correspondence courses would be better than interior campuses remote from students.

The university agreed in principle last December to accept responsibility for setting up university programs in non-metropolitan areas as recommended by the government-appointed Winegard commission.

"The committee has not felt itself bound to follow the Winegard proposals in detail," the committee said in releasing its report last week.

The committee "does not believe that the best interests of the Interior can be met by setting up small SFUs at particular locations," the report added.

"In the first place, many potential students are not within commuting distance of these centres and, secondly, the range of courses ... must inevitably be very limited."

Instead, the report recommends a sophisticated correspondence teaching system backed up by seminars, intensive short courses and tutorials at specific locations.

Link chickens out after egg struggle

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Arnold Link ended 10 years of struggle against the British Columbia Egg Marketing Board Tuesday by giving away about 3,000 of his hens.

Link said he expected to wrap up the disposal of his assets today. He recently sold an Okanagan egg farm his quota allotment right to have 14,000 birds and produce 200 cases of eggs a week.

There are 30 dozen eggs in a case.

Six thousand hens were sold with the quota for a price Link said would pay all his bills accrued in battles with the marketing board during the last decade. Link has argued that Interior producers need more protection from cheap egg supplies imported from the Lower Mainland.

Link is keeping about 500 hens for income and is giving away the remainder on a first-come, first-served basis.

Link limited customers to 20 chickens a family and his farm 10 miles west of Prince George was the scene of a steady procession of chicken-lovers carting away their booty in sacks, bags and cardboard boxes.

Grizzly Valley inquiry sizzles

VANCOUVER (CP) — The lawyer for Arthur Weeks, a central figure in the inquiry into the trading of shares of companies involved in Grizzly Valley natural gas development, Tuesday described Weeks as "just a salesman" out to sell British Columbia.

Weeks was an aide to Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, but was fired from the post after he admitted trading in shares of companies affected by pipeline development in the northeast region of the province.

Lawyer C. O. D. Branson said Weeks had been told to sell B.C. and to restore investor confidence. Of Weeks' share purchases, Branson asked: "what would you say of a salesman who wouldn't invest himself in what he's selling?"

TDAC program finalized

Terrace and District Arts Council has now finalized the program for the Summer School of the Arts to be held in Terrace July 11 to August 12. The program will include: Weaving, Quilting, Silkscreen, Children's Art, Creative Writing, Piano, Recreational Singing and Recreational Dance. Suzuki Piano and Singing conducted by the Terrace Talent Educators will also be part of the Summer School, and a film series of artistic films will be arranged. Persons interested in drama can participate in an exciting six week program of drama instruction conducted by Brian Paisley, Consultant to the B.C. Drama Association; the drama program will culminate with a production of Macbeth in the R.E.M. Lee Theatre.

Courses and workshops will be of varying length. Some will be completed in two or three days, while others will run through the whole Summer School period. In some cases, times and dates can be arranged to suit the persons enrolled.

"We are very excited about the program," said Ken Morton, Chairman of the Committee organizing the Summer School. "If we get good reaction from the public this year, we can plan something more ambitious next year; but in the meantime, we think we have a good variety of courses with very good instructors," commented Morton.

More to choose as Totem TV expands

"We have lots of confidence in the town of Terrace. We're expanding because the town is expanding," says Peter Gray of Totem T.V. in Terrace.

"We're really pleased with our customers. They've always come first with us, and they've been really good to us."

Things are so good for Totem T.V. that they have just opened a new store at 4607 Lakelse specializing in electronics. The Radio Shack line, Realistic, will be featured as well as Sony and R.C.A. radios, T.V.'s, and stereos.

Appliances and furniture, a "natural" pair, will stay at the old location at 4554 Lakelse. Changes are in progress there, too. The entire store is being remodelled, and there is talk of obtaining more lines in furniture.

"We were thinking of expanding," said Dick Sharples, "and then one morning somebody woke up and thought 'why not split the store into appliances and furniture in one place and electronics in another.' It made sense, so here we are."

Customers can rest assured that they will still receive fine service for the products they buy at either store. Service and repairs are done right here by the store's own repair men. The technician, who handles radio and T.V. work, has been in electronics for 25 years; the appliance and refrigeration man has been in his field for 12 years.

The people backing them up, Totem T.V., have been in Terrace for 14 years. The Radio Shack franchise has been under their awning for two years time. It is the fastest growing electronics chain in the world, as well as the largest. Radio Shack started with one outlet in Canada six years ago; today there are 600.

The franchise deals in many parts and accessories for radio and stereo buffs. The C.B. equipment includes the new 40 channel C.B. radios. There is about $50,000.00 worth of merchandise to look over and choose from.

Business has been good at the other store. We're optimistic, that's why we're expanding. Whatever economic slump there has been

Ed Moldenhauer, appliance and refrigerator repairman Totem T.V. has something to smile about. He has a lot more room to work in now that the T.V. and radio people have moved out of the old store at 4554 Lakelse. Ed and his buddies will stay there, though, to remodel the premises and continue selling furniture and appliances.

Shown are the two owners of Totem T.V., Peter Gray and Dick Sharples, electronics store at 4607 Lakelse Avenue. The store features the Realistic line of equipment in radio and stereos made by Radio Shack. Other names in stereo and T.V. are Sony and R.C.A. The store has opened this week.

hasn't affected us. We had a good increase in sales last year, and we expect to do well here," said Sharples.

"And all the money from this store stays in Terrace...all except what the government gets!"

There will be a lot of opening specials at the store, and some free gifts. Thursday the first 25 customers at the new store will receive free

Radio Shack t-shirts, and Friday 100 Radio Shack beach balls will be given away.

Go in and take a look at some familiar faces in a new setting.

Jets clobber les Nordiques 12-3

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Jets scored a record 12 goals Tuesday night to whip Quebec Nordiques 12-3 and force a seventh game in the World Hockey Association championship.

A noisy two-minute standing ovation at the beginning of the game sent the Jets out flying and it took just one minute and 29 seconds before Hull put them on the scoreboard. With Cloutier off for interference, Winnipeg defenceman Mike Ford knocked J. C. Tremblay off the puck at centre ice and sent Ulf Nilsson and Hull away. Nilsson made the perfect pass for Hull to deflect into the net.

But Cloutier came out of the penalty box and redeemed himself with his 12th and 13th goals of the playoffs to tie a WHA record and put Quebec ahead 2-1. Cloutier cut across in front of the net and rifled a shot along the ice behind Winnipeg goaltender Joe Daley at 3:02. He then redirected Tardif's pass on a three-man break at 4:28. The Jets came back with three straight goals and that drove the capacity crowd of 10,059 into a frenzy. Labraaten deflected Peter Sullivan's goalmouth pass at 9:17 and the Jets then victimized Tremblay for the next two goals at 12:09 and 13:47. Nilsson knocked the veteran defenceman off the puck and Hedberg went in against John Bernier. Bernier stopped the initial shot but the puck dropped behind him and Hedberg picked it up and easily beat the startled Richard Brodeur. Fran Huck then got the puck in the corner, fed it to Miller who made a return pass. Huck slid the puck between a defenceman's legs to Guindon who beat Brodeur from pointblank range. The goal came seconds after Brodeur had made a brilliant save on Guindon on a breakaway. But with both teams playing wide open offensively, both Brodeur and Daley often found themselves at the mercy of opposing forwards. The Nordiques' line of Tardif, Cloutier and Chris Bordeleau put on tremendous pressure and with Daley on his back after making three initial saves, Bordeleau scored at 18:35. The goal kept Quebec close but Winnipeg took almost total control in the second period to score four unanswered goals. Hull, Sullivan, Ford and Guindon scored to give Winnipeg an 8-3 margin going into the final period.

The final game of the best-of-seven series will be played in Quebec Thursday night. Quebec had a chance to win their first championship with a victory Tuesday and held a 2-1 lead early in the first period. But the Jets, defending champions, moved into a 4-3 lead by the end of the period and then demolished Quebec with four unanswered goals in each of the last two periods.

The previous playoff record was 10 goals scored by Houston Aeros in a 10-1 win over Winnipeg in 1974. Bobby Hull scored three goals for Winnipeg while Anders Hedberg, Bobby Guindon and Peter Sullivan each added a pair. Singles were scored by Dan Labraaten, Mike Ford and Willy Lindstrom.

Real Cloutier scored twice for Quebec and Chris Bordeleau got the other.

Swimming

TOKYO (AFP) — The third world swimming championships will be held in West Berlin in August next year, with 500 competitors from more than 50 countries participating. They were approved at the second session Tuesday of the three-day 1977 International Amateur Swimming Federation (FINA) meeting.

Olympics

TEHERAN (Reuters) — Iran has changed its mind about bidding for the 1984 Olympic Games and will not be submitting a formal application later this year, informed sources said Tuesday.

Boycott

CANBERRA (Reuters) — An Australian aborigine leader called Tuesday for a boycott of the 1982 Commonwealth Games in Brisbane because of what he said were the Queensland State government's racist policies. Joe McGinnis, president of the Federal Council for the Advancement of Aborigines and Torres Strait Islanders, said the boycott would be part of a national and international campaign against Queensland products.

Tennis

PARIS (AP) — Dr. Renee Richards, the transsexual tennis player seeking to play in her first major tournament, withdrew Tuesday from the French Open without further explanation after undergoing a sex test. Tournament director Pierre Darmon said that the California resident had received the results of the examination, but that he did not know them.

Ryan fans 12 Tigers in Angel win

Nolan Ryan struck out 12 and held Detroit to just three hits Tuesday night as California Angels edged the Tigers 2-1 in an American League baseball game.

It was the 75th time Ryan has struck out 10 or more, an American League record. It also was the fire-balling right-hander's 100th AL victory against 82 defeats. California's two runs came in the second as singles by Joe Rudi, Bobby Bonds and Ron Jackson brought home one run. Bonds scored on a sacrifice fly by Bobby Grich. n

A squeeze bunt by Frank Duffy scored Andre Thornton with the tie-breaking run and Cleveland Indians went on to post a 7-5 victory over Seattle Mariners. It was Cleveland's third win in a row.

Graig Nettles and Carlos May slammed consecutive home runs to touch off a four-run rally that lifted New York Yankees to a 6-5 victory over Boston Red Sox. George Scott homered for Boston as loser Luis Tiant, 2-4, failed to gain his 100th victory as a member of the Red Sox.

A five-run fifth inning, sparked by Hector Cruz's two-run triple, helped St. Louis Cardinals hand Philadelphia Phillies an 8-5 National League defeat. Pitcher Bob Forsch, who has lost once, became the first seven-game winner in the NL. Greg Luzinski drove in all five Philadelphia runs with a single and a pair of two-run homers.

Chris Speier scored from second on a pinch single by Jose Morales in the 13th inning as Montreal Expos edged Chicago Cubs 5-4. Barry Foote slammed a two-out homer in the eighth for Montreal to knot the game at 4-4. After Chicago pitcher Rick Reuschel missed the ball on a suicide squeeze attempt, he followed with his second major league home run.

Pittsburgh Pirates took a 5-2 triumph over New York Mets behind the combined pitching of Jerry Reuss and Terry Forster. Al Oliver's homer sparked a three-run fourth inning by the Pirates as Pittsburgh snapped a string of 19 scoreless innings by loser Jon Matlack when it took a 1-0 lead in the second.

Former boxing champ charged with murder

NEWCASTLE, N.B. (CP) — Yvon Durelle, former Canadian and British Empire light heavyweight boxing champion, was charged today with second-degree murder in the shooting death Friday of Albin Poirier, 32, of Bale Ste. Anne, Durelle's home town. Durelle, who decked Archie Moore several times in a wellremembered Montreal fight in the 1950s, which the Bale Ste. Anne

A preliminary hearing on the charge was scheduled June 15.

Coalition formed

NEW YORK (AP) — A coalition of 15 organizations will make the first combined effort to end all United States athletic competitions with South Africa.

The group has taken the name of the American Coordinating Committee for Equality in Sport and Society (ACCESS) and will be comprised of political, religious, civil rights and sports organizations which plan to "hammer away at the issue" of racial separatism in South Africa, a spokesman said.

South Africa has been barred from the last three Olympic Games, soccer's World Cup and several other international competitions, but was reinstated in Davis Cup tennis play and is scheduled to play in the Federation Cup tennis tournament next month at Eastbourne, England.

Sick tennis player survives clay courts

PARIS (AP) — Harold Solomon came back from illness Tuesday and survived his first match in the French Open tennis championships on the grueling slow clay courts of the Roland Garros Stadium.

The little star from Pompano Beach, Fla., defeated John Feaver, a lanky Englishman, 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

Solomon reached the final of the tournament last year. His illness, which baffled the doctors, prevented him from touching a racket for three weeks, and he admitted the two-hour match against Feaver drained his energy.

"I could have done with a long rest after the second set, I was that tired," Solomon said. "Now I shall have a day off before the next round, and I hope I shall get back into the swing of tournament play."

The French championships are not the best form of recuperation after illness. Matches follow the traditional five-set formula, and the long rallies on the slow surface are a challenge even to the fittest.

Dr. Renee Richards, the transsexual player who once competed in the men's singles at Forest Hills, N.Y., withdrew from the women's event after being given the results of one more sex test.

Richards failed an Olympic-style chromosomes test before the Italian championships in Rome, and was told she must undergo another examination in Paris.

Tournament officials did not make the results of the test public but merely said the findings had been sent to Richards by the hospital, and she had withdrawn. Clearly, she had failed the test again.

Ilie Nastase of Romania, one of the likeliest challengers for the title in a depleted field, defeated Lito Alvarez of Argentina 7-6, 6-3, 6-2 before a big crowd on the centre court.

Nastase looked subdued and uncertain in the first set and was taken to six-all in a tiebreaker before winning it. But then he found his rhythm and was an easy winner.

American victors included Tom Gullikson and Trey Waltke. Gullikson beat Britain's Robin Drysdale 7-6, 6-3, 0-6, 6-3. Waltke had a tough workout before overcoming Gianni Occeppo, the Italian No. 8-ranked player, 6-3, 5-7, 7-6, 6-2.

Lions send Guthrie to Alouettes

VANCOUVER (CP) — General manager Bob Ackles of the British Columbia Lions today announced that a trade has been completed with the Montreal Alouettes sending quarterback Eric Guthrie to Montreal for Canadian defensive back Glenn Leach.

Leach played the last six games of the 1976 season for Montreal after having been drafted in the fourth round of the Canadian Football League drafts. He is 22 years old, 5-foot-11 and weighs 185 pounds. He attended Wilfrid Laurier University at Waterloo, Ont. Guthrie has been with the Lions for five years, is 30 years old, and started as quarterback for the first eight games last season. He is 6-foot-1 and weighs 200 pounds.

Jockey blameless in mishap

NEW YORK (AP) — Seattle Slew's jockey, Jean Cruguet, was exonerated of any blame Tuesday in the disqualification on Monday of his mount in the Shuvee Handicap at Belmont Park.

Secret Lanvin, ridden by Cruguet, was set back from first to third for interference in the deep stretch on Monday.

The stewards' decision not to suspend the French jockey kept clear the way for his ride in the Belmont Stakes June 11 aboard Seattle Slew, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

Not guilty say Dolphins

MIAMI (AP) — Don Reese and Randy Crowder of Miami Dolphins entered not guilty pleas Tuesday to charges of selling more than a pound of cocaine to Miami undercover police agents last month.

Circuit Court Judge Joseph Durant set a tentative June 27 trial date for the two National Football League players.

Reese and Crowder, released on bail and suspended from the team, did not appear in court. Their pleas were entered by lawyer Barry Garber.

The two are charged with sale and possession of cocaine, and conspiracy to sell the illegal drug. n

Police said the two were arrested May 4 in a Miami motel by two Miami plainclothesmen after the meeting was set up by airline stewardess Camille Richardson, 23.

Richardson pleaded no contest to conspiracy charges last weekend and was placed on probation providing she testifies against the two athletes.

In an unrelated case, 280-pound Dolphins tackle Darryl Carlton entered a no contest plea Tuesday to an aggravated assault charge.

He was charged with beating up a cocktail lounge security guard Jan. 21. Police said Carlton went on a rampage, striking Leonard Bryant, 41, and smashing furniture before leaving the lounge and being involved in a five-car fiery crash.

Carlton will be sentenced Friday when he appears before Judge Paul Baker.

Need programs, not rhetoric, says Brewin

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Brewin, newly-elected New Democratic Party provincial president, says the party must move away from rhetoric and concentrate on putting together programs that can win elections.

Brewin, a Victoria lawyer recognized as a choice of the party's establishment wing, said in an interview Monday that the NDP still suffers to a degree from a split personality—trying to decide if it is a movement that should concentrate on ideology or if it is a political party whose prime job ought to be to try to win elections.

He said he is of the latter persuasion and said the party will be judged "by effectiveness, the degree to which people's lives can be improved. (by the party's programs)."

Brewin said new party members, particularly young people, "tend to respond more to practical issues."

A slate headed by Brewin captured all but two of the 16 seats on the provincial executive at the NDP's annual convention that ended Monday.

The so-called open caucus, generally considered the more leftist-oriented sections of the party, supported by the Women's Caucus, took two seats including the position of first vice-president, which went to ex-MLA

Doctors divided over Laetrile

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ranks of organized medicine in the United States have broken for the first time in the long controversy over the alleged anti-cancer agent Laetrile.

One of the profession's most respected voices, Dr. Lewis Thomas, now says that human clinical tests must be undertaken and he is known to feel that the matter is urgent. But on Tuesday the American Cancer Society expressed shock at the idea.

Thomas, president of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Centre in New York, is known to feel that the medical and scientific professions must act to establish the facts because several states have approved the use of Laetrile without medical evidence of its effectiveness.

Thomas feels that a special epidemiological team should conduct a study of people who claim to have benefited from Laetrile treatment and to find out what kind of cancer they had, what other treatment they received and what the results were.

He also recommends that a special committee be established to review the results of both studies. The committee should be comprised of professionals and laymen, he says.

Thomas' comments came as the National Cancer Institute (NCI) said it is "seriously considering" using Laetrile in tests on humans.

The American Cancer Society, however, said that it is "a little shocked" at the statement by the NCI. The American Medical Association said it was standing by its position that Laetrile is not recognized as either safe or effective.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) takes the position that Laetrile must first be shown in animal trials to be safe and effective before any human trials can be undertaken. The FDA has banned Laetrile from interstate commerce but this ban does not apply to Laetrile produced and used within an individual state.

Moves to legalize Laetrile are under way in a growing number of states.

Alaska, Florida, Indiana, Arizona and Nevada have legalized the substance. Legislatures in Texas and Washington have voted to legalize it, and their acts are awaiting approval of the governors of those two states.

Laetrile is the chemical amygdalin, which occurs naturally in the pits of apricots and peaches and in bitter almonds. At a recent FDA hearing in Kansas City, Mo., the weight of the scientific evidence presented was that Laetrile was not effective in cancer treatment.

But public pressure is changing some opinions on testing. "It seems to us that societal pressure has something to do with this," said Dr. Guy Newell, acting director of NCI.

"Many people are getting the drug. Some individuals claim it is beneficial. It has no apparent toxicity. But all of this has persuaded us to reopen the issue of conducting a clinical trial."

He said he hopes the party will have 30,000 members by the end of the year, up from 25,000 now, and says it will be well prepared to fight the next election.

Other table officers elected, in addition to Brewin and Steves, were Gerry Stoney, president of the New Westminster local of the International Woodworkers of America, second vice-president; Corliss Miller, an NDP candidate in the last election, third vice-president; Nanaimo MLA Dave Stupich, fourth vice-president; and Roger Howard, of Vancouver, re-elected treasurer.

He said he hopes the party will have 30,000 members by the end of the year, up from 25,000 now, and says it will be well prepared to fight the next election.

Nixon jumps on Agnew

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon says that when he learned in 1973 about the investigations involving Spiro Agnew, "there wasn't any question ... that he was, frankly, going to get it."

In an interview to be shown on television tonight, Nixon discusses for the first time what happened inside the White House in the weeks preceding the Oct. 10, 1973, resignation of Agnew as vice-president. He describes his handling of the matter as "pragmatic."

Nixon also talks about suggestions that he pardon

Ferry users faced long lines of traffic

VANCOUVER (CP) — As usual, the long weekend brought long traffic lineups but the only problem was at the LANGDALE FERRY TERMINAL ON Howe Sound 17 miles northwest of here where a number of motorists didn't make it onto the last sailing and were stranded until morning.

A B.C. Ferries supervisor said late Monday she anticipated no people would have to be turned back at either the Departure Bay or Swartz Bay terminals on Vancouver Island.

A ship leaving Swartz Bay was delayed about 45 minutes, she said, and more than 400 cars had to wait at Nanaimo until the next sailing.

An RCMP spokesman said motorists from both the Hope/Princeton Highway and the Fraser Canyon were backed up for miles Monday, trying to enter Hope. He said traffic was heaviest from noon to 8 p.m. Monday, when there were more than six minor accidents.

A spokesman at the Douglas border crossing said traffic was not heavy Monday because many motorists returned from the United States on Sunday because of poor weather. He said all the seven lanes entering Canada were in use Monday but the longest reported wait was 30 minutes.

But at the commercial crossing at Pacific Highway, he added, traffic was heavy because many people were taking advantage of the duty-free liquor store there.

"I was very pragmatic," Nixon said. "There wasn't any question after hearing Petersen and his version that he (Agnew) was frankly going to get it."

Harold Steves of Richmond, and to Terri Ash of Kamloops, who was elected to one of 10 positions as executive member-at-large.

Another indication of the control of the establishment was that the convention consistently voted down challenges from the floor to the chairman during convention proceedings.

Brewin received official blessing when he was nominated for party president by former member of Parliament Grace McInnis who recalled his impressive credentials of party work and his impeccable party lineage as the son of MP Andy Brewin.

Brewin, president of the Victoria NDP constituency association, is a former member of the NDP federal executive, a former treasurer of the Ontario NDP and was a provincial candidate in Ontario in 1967 and 1971.

He won the vote for president with 667 votes to 283 for Terri Ash.

Other table officers elected, in addition to Brewin and Steves, were Gerry Stoney, president of the New Westminster local of the International Woodworkers of America, second vice-president; Corliss Miller, an NDP candidate in the last election, third vice-president; Nanaimo MLA Dave Stupich, fourth vice-president; and Roger Howard, of Vancouver, re-elected treasurer.

He said he hopes the party will have 30,000 members by the end of the year, up from 25,000 now, and says it will be well prepared to fight the next election.

Carter wants support for genocide law

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter wants the U.S. Senate to approve the United Nations convention on genocide, supported by 83 countries but not by the United States.

The convention, adopted by the United Nations in 1948, undertakes to establish genocide, the destruction of a national, ethnic, racial or religious group, as a crime under each country's legal system.

"Ratification would be a significant enhancement of the human rights commitments of this nation, demonstrating again to the world in concrete fashion our determination to advance and protect human rights," Carter said Tuesday in a message to the Senate.

himself in his final days in office; his thoughts as he left the White House for the last time as president; his offer of legal fees to former aides H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman and why he did not pardon them.

He also tells why he accepted the pardon issued by his successor, Gerald Ford, one month after Nixon left office, and his thoughts about the press.

The former president said he called Agnew into his office on Sept. 25, 1973, and asked point blank whether the vice-president was maintaining his innocence. Agnew, according to Nixon, said he was.
